ROLL PLAY

The mobile office has been around since the invention of casters. Here are eight ways to fly around the workspace with grace

BY DAVID DICK-AGNEW

BRAINSTORMING THE NEXT BIG IDEA

THE CHAIR Part task chair and part casual seat, Ciell, by Noé Duchaufour-Lawrance, combines flexibility and elegant comfort. Available in seven base types, including this five-branch version with casters. $1,430, tabisso.com

THE WHITEBOARD Stefan Borselius designed Sense, for Sweden's Abstracta, with a white glass upper. Markers stow discreetly behind the moulded wooden base on two wheels, which sits flat for better stability. $3,330, abstracta.se

ORGANIZING WITH AN EYE FOR DETAIL

THE CHAIR Keilhauer's Juxta collection fits perfectly into any contemporary office with its twin-wheel casters and an attached table that swivels freely on a petite base, for ultimate hot-spot manoeuvrability. From $700, keilhauer.com

THE STORAGE UNIT The bench-like structure of Gispen's Duobox is wrapped in veneered plywood and goes right where you need it. The upper shelving section, made from powder-coated metal, houses files. $2,770, gispen.com

COLLABORATING VIA TECHNOLOGY

THE CHAIR Gispen's Triennial makes a statement with its sporty white rollers, designed to move effortlessly on hard or soft floors. The adjustable-height seat and back cushion can be upholstered in individual fabrics. $720, gispen.com

THE STORAGE UNIT With its bigger-than-average casters, Abstracta's Mobi Tech is ideal for moving monitors and large TVs around the office, and for storing tech gear in the cabinet underneath. $7,165, abstracta.se

FINDING TIMELESS INSPIRATION

THE STORAGE UNIT Kartell's Mobil still looks fresh, 20 years after Antonio Citterio and Glen Oliver Löw designed it, partly due to its elevating swivel wheels. The chrome-plated frame holds one to six drawers. From $800, kartell.it

THE CHAIR With Lotus De Luxe, Jasper Morrison expands his ergonomic 2007 line, adding a model in walnut or natural oak. The latest update to Cappellini's stately task chair will be released in North America in early fall. cappellini.it
